Addressing misinformation through digital content provenance.

We are an Adobe-led community of major media and tech companies, NGOs, academics, and others working to promote adoption of an open industry standard for content authenticity and provenance so consumers can evaluate what digital media is real and what has been altered, while also enabling creators to get credit for their work.

The Content Authenticity Initiative (CAI) is building an open-source system to securely preserve provenance and attribution data for digital content to counter the rise of mis/disinformation.

Please join Santiago Lyon, Head of Advocacy and Education for the CAI, on Friday, April 8 at 6:30 p.m. as he introduces the CAI and moderates a discussion about the mis/disinformation landscape with Phil Chetwynd, AFP's Global News Director, Laura Ellis, the BBC's Head of Technology Forecasting and Gary Knight, co-founder of the VII Agency and the VII Academy.
